Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

...and how to handle them

I'm Always Right

Characteristics

Arrogant, Aggressive, Egotistic, "My way or the high way" Attitude

Handle Them By:

.

Being very clear about your facts (write them down if you have to). Keeping your distance if they don't agree. Hoping they learn from their failures.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit : KaiChanVong via Compfight

oil praised for hi

NIO LIZAMA CIL CHEPATCH

ND-Third-gra Oliver pat up a s from school T er, except for the over the attent ive at his Cool School in H WINDERSTON TOP its year's nath ing Week Ext

HEVER RECEIPTING ecuryo hin pri

Month ows patterns in 'bullying and Straight Education Network (GLSEN) recemby ed "From Teasing to Tonnent: A Proble of School Climate revides a note look into student experiences with bullying used on students in Florida from Io Name-Calling Week

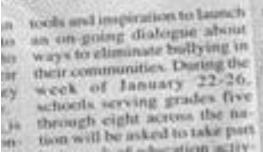

all kinds.

SAY 'NO' TO BULLYING

January is

Bullying

Awareness

In 2004, over 3,000 educa tors, administrators, parer or students registered fre over 600 schools nationw to participate in the ci paign's first year. No Nr Calling Week 2004 was a mendous soccess

Characteristics

Aggressive, Discriminatory, Harasses People

Handle Them By:

Politely, but firmly tell them that their behavior is offensive.

Not Being afraid to go to HR or your boss if it gets to be too much.

Having a zero tolerance attitude.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Wikipedia

Pessimistic, Finds Faults, Points Fingers

.

Handle Them By:

Staying emotionally detached to avoid their negativity.

Always having a positive come back to their negative attitudes.

Not letting them point fingers to your team members.

Figuring out the cause of their problems to prove them wrong.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Gianna Borgnine via Compfight

Untrustworthy, Flaky, Sneaky, Overly Friendly

Handle Them By:

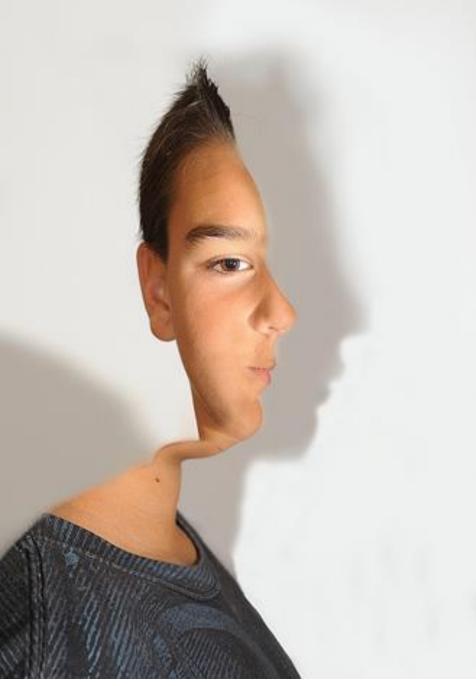

Not providing any ammunition to use against you.

Always having only professionals conversations with them.

Winning them over by complimenting their successes.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: sidewalk flying via Compfight

Fake, Hypocritical, Discredits Others, Jealous

Handle Them By:

.

Keeping written records of things you've done together.

Verifying what they say about other people.

Always double checking your facts.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: patdebaz via Compfight

Manipulative, Conniving, Understands Power Plays

Handle Them By:

Listening more than talking.

Avoiding saying things that can be taken out of context.

Understanding how this person could use information to influence situations

Knowing who this person connects too and building you own relationships with them.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: European Parliament via Flickr

Gives Unending Praise, Driven by an Agenda, Doubtful of their Own Competence

Handle Them By:

.

Never giving into fake compliments.

Always remembering that there's a hidden motive.

Understanding what makes them insecure and providing support, if possible.

Helping steer them away from hidden motives and instead focusing on team agenda.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Robert S. Donovan via Flickr

Defensive, Egotistic, No Empathy, Selfish

Handle Them By:

Setting clear boundaries.

Remembering that you need to be selfish sometimes.

Not getting caught up in their all-knowing attitude.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Celine Nadeau via Flickr

#9 Look Busy, Do Nothing

Characteristics

Lazy, Doesn't Deliver Results, Wastes Time and Resources

Handle Them By:

.

Not letting their laziness effect you.

Telling them what they're doing and how it's negatively effecting team performance.

Factoring their low delivery rate into project timelines to give realistic expectations.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Feggy Art via Compfight

Judgmental, Overly Shares, Forces Ideas On to Others

Handle Them By:

Killing them with kindness.

Letting them know they're not acting in a way that's good for the team.

Showing them through example that agreeing and disagreeing is good for the team.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Phoenix Custom Bricks via Flickr

Late in Delivering, Nitpicks, Never Satisfied with Deliverables

Handle Them By:

Not taking their criticism personally.

Placing them in a position where their perfectionism will benfit the team.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: shonaliburke via Compfight

Brags, Lies, Takes Advantage of Others

Handle Them By:

Standing up for yourself and taking credit where it's due.

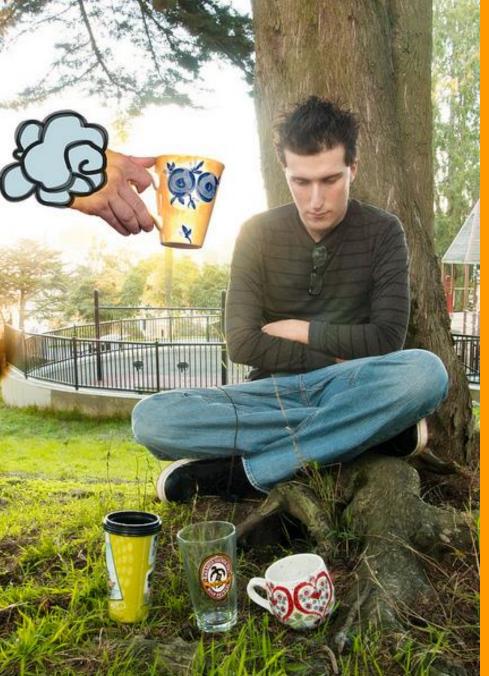

Not letting them steal your light.

Never feeling bad for taking pride in your work, publicly.

Not hesitating to jokingly make fun of this jerk when they steal credit.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Don Hankins via Compfight

Self-Depreciating, Insecure, Lacks Confidence

Handle Them By:

.

Putting a bubble of positive energy around this person, while not letting yourself get drained.

Keeping yourself emotionally detached and believing the glass is half full.

Engaging this person in work to keep them preoccupied.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: David Goehring via Flickr

Overachieving

Characteristics

Does More Than Their Share, Makes Others Look Bad, Always Looks Busy

Handle Them By:

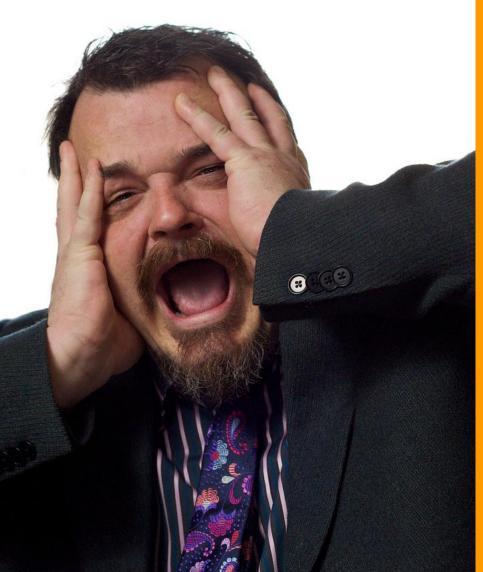

Throwing challenges at them so they don't take away from others.

Making sure the rest of the team realizes they don't have to keep pace with them.

Remembering everyone has different personal priorities.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: Trojan Llama via Compfight

Blames Others, Low Attitude, Constantly Complains

Handle Them By:

.

Keeping your emotional distance and not getting caught up in their negative energy.

Talk to them positively, when they're willing to listen.

Making sure no one gets a free ride.

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

Image Credit: bark via Flickr

Engage Asia with Paul Keijzer

15 Type of Jerks in the Office

...and how to handle them